Introduction:

Hayley has owned Paul for 3 years and jumped him herself at Grade C until she had her little boy, William. He is now ridden by Josh Ross-Millar and competes weekly. Nicknamed "The Model" at home, he is a really quality little horse with a very fine coat which looks stunning but does mean that he has very sensitive skin. He has suffered from lower limb bacterial skin infections in the past, which means that he is slightly prone to flair up. The wet weather approaching will make this predilection more likely to reoccur but with good management it has not proved hard to keep at bay. His legs have always been treated regularly with an antibacterial wash and for the last three weeks he has also had Think Mud as part of his feeding regime to boost his immunity. The results in such a short time are very good with no new lesions and completely settled skin with fresh hair growth. "You can not even see that he has ever had a skin infection now, let's hope we have seen the last of his Mud Fever," said Josh.

The products:

Think Mud is a brand new nutritional supplement, designed to help maintain healthy skin and hair throughout the winter months. By providing specific ingredients such as plant extracts and trace elements it helps to maintain a healthy immune system, to ensure that the body's natural repair mechanisms are working efficiently. A combination of antioxidant vitamins, concentrated isoflavonoids and yeast extracts work in synergy to provide the horse with everything he needs for an easy winter. 1.5kg container (50 day supply) £29.95
