A testimonial I would say is, Brinicombe Equine are the only company I have spoken to out of many that took the time to go through the history & problems of my horse & didn't just sell me a product for what was assumed was the problem when in fact something else caused it.

I have tried many different foot products to improve horn growth in the 3 years I have had Bradley. I originally thought the reason for the poor growth was due to him never having "hard" feed before I had him. Last September I put him onto ~~XXXXXX~~, supposedly the best of the best!! his feet seemed to improve up until I started to compete in April & then its been downhill all the way! I have struggled to keep shoes on as he has to nail to and after GB championships in August, decided to finish for the season. I spoke to several companies all recommended their hoof supplement to improve hoof growth but a friend from tree recommended I speak to Hermione but Brncombe before I did anything.

I was so impressed, she rang me back whilst at an event and went right back through the horses history and problems over the 3 yrs I have had him. Hermione came to the conclusion it was a gut problem not taking from the food what he required, also causing him to be a fussy eater and be "Sugar Intolerant" on loose weight in winter. She recommended Think Pink Gut powder. I am thrilled with the results of the product, it is inexpensive & my boy loves it, he is keen for his food at night & licks the bowl clean. I also have bought the foot product however as a test, the only thing I changed was adding the Think Pink to the diet, I kept everything else the same. I was so elated yesterday when the blacksmith came and announced "his feet have grown" Thankyou Hermione for taking the time! Jackie
